WELCOME TO ISRII

At the first international meeting on CBT and the Internet (held at Karolinska Hospital in Stockholm, Sweden on the 17-18 September, 2004) an international society was formed. This website is the virtual home.

The International Society for Research on Internet Interventions (ISRII) is a non-profit organization of researchers whose focus is on the development and testing of various web-based health treatment programs. The aim of the society is to promote exchanges of ideas and experiences among researchers involved in treatment/intervention research using the Internet. Among the many interests shared by the members are cognitive behavioral interventions using the Internet, technical solutions in web applications, web-based questionnaire assessments, and computer applications in clinical psychology and in psychiatry more broadly.

From this home page, information on becoming a member of the society, joining the society's list-serv, and information on the annual conference is accessible. For members of the organization, a password protected section of the site is available and contains a contact members list, an active Bulletin Board, summaries and links to Internet interventions, and relevant publications.
